The beautiful Viennese bar maids of the Parisian Exposition have drawn the greatest prizes, to the no little disgust of the exhibition directors of the Parisian fete mode. Five of them have disappeared, and found wealthy "protectors." Their friends, it is true, say they have been married to noblemen and millionaires, but the general impression is that none of the "fortunate" girls can exhibit marriage certificates. The most beautiful of them is Kitchi, who has sold herself to a dissipated old Marquis for the sum of two hundred thousand francs, which is to be paid after his death. A wealthy young American is said to have taken another Viennese bar maid under his protecting wings. Five new bar maids, as beautiful as their predecessors, were sent for to Vienna, and have already arrived in Paris.

TUESDAY, : : : : : SEPTEMBER 24, 1867

"O, THE times! O, the manners!" We live in an age of little men. The giants have all sickened and died and their places have been usurped by a race of dwarfs. Statesmanship has perished, but demagoguery flourishes. Freedom languishes; despotism is triumphant. Patriotism slumbers; fanaticism is holding high carnival. Among the bankruptcies of the day, the moral insolvencies of the people are more frequent than any other. The country has descended in the scale of moral and intellectual greatness until our people no longer have among them men worthy or capable of wearing the high honors and filling the responsible trust they have to bestow. Instead of a large and comprehensive statesmanship; instead of looking to the future grandeur and glory of the country; instead of pouring oil upon the troubled waters, and counseling peace, forbearance, and consideration, the maddened, deluded fools have set up a black god, just as the demons in the shape of men, in the first French revolution took a strumpet and sat her up for public worship, calling her the Goddess of Reason. The heathens never worshipped the sun, the moon, the earth, a spotted bull nor a puling cat with more idolatrous devotion than these modern heathens lavish upon their black and odoriferous god. Their aim and object seems to be to produce universal anarchy, such as prevailed in that ignorant period of the Jews, in which we are told "in those days there was no King in Israel, but every man did that which was right in his own eyes." When BACCHUS and his army were hungering, thirsting and perishing in the desert, a ram appeared in the very nick of time, and guided them to a verdant spot, where a murmuring brook gushed out of the earth. Out of gratitude, a statue was here erected, with the head and horns of a ram. Will not another JUPITER send an accommodating statesman to lead the American people out of the darkness in which they are groping? Will not the good genius of our country send some great patriot, who will lead a people, thirsting for the waters of peace, to some little brook in the desert of hate and anarchy? To such a man a statue will be erected, high as heaven, adorned, not with crooked horns, but with inscriptions of praise that will blaze out with a fadeless luster. But in the councils of the nation we know of no man equal to the occasion. Weakness, corruption, fanaticism, anarchy and despotism usurps the place of greatness, purity, order and statesmanship. Great men often make great occasions, but the times and manners have so changed that we have no man gifted with all the high qualities of brain and heart necessary to still the troubled waters, and to whom the people can look with hope and confidence.

Mighty questions are before the people. O, that we had mighty men to meet them. The American people blush for shame when they contrast the intellectual body of men that graced the halls of Congress twenty years ago with the pigmies that now profanate their seats. In the radiant host CLAY shone foremost and brightest. What Neptune was to the tumultuous sea, so was HENRY CLAY to the United States Senate. His serene spirit often hushed and calmed the storms that convulsed the nation. Instead of hearing the music of his clarion voice ringing out words of wisdom, patriotism and statesmanship to calm and hush the storms that convulsed the nation, we hear the hoarse voice of old BEN WADE, which is about as patriotic and mellifluous as that of JOHN ROE, who went about the camps of our enemies during the revolution crying "beef! beef!" The seat once occupied by WEBSTER, another CATO discussing mighty questions among mighty men with an eloquence that moved the hearts of statesmen, and nerved the arm of patriots, is filled by CHARLES SUMNER, a pedantic knave, an abject coward, who in his seat swelters like a toad, hisses like an adder, and snarls like a maddened cur. CHARLES SUMNER in the seat of DANIEL WEBSTER! A bull in a china shop—an ass in a lion's skin, a jackdaw dressed in the plumage of an eagle, are not greater absurdities. Once JOHN C. CALHOUN, the brilliant meteor, the subtle logician, the student by night to espy out facts, and the Cossack by day to spear the enemy with them, filled a place in the Senate. But now it is desecrated by a little thingwho back from his seat as owls sometimes hoot from the costly domes of magnificent though deserted temples. Where once the classic PRENTISS, of Mississippi poured out a torrent of eloquence, cutting down the enemies of the Constitution with his glittering blade of Damascus or Toledo, may be seen the club footed devil, STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, hobbling up to the altar on which he burns the incense of hate, envy and fanaticism. Verily have the times and the manners changed! Our great and good men have passed away, and their places occupied by poor little huckstering demagogues who cannot rise above the petty spite which always finds a congenial home in the bosom of men whose souls are as little as their hearts are narrow and contracted.

OF

ON TEN YEARS' CREDIT.

I PROPOSE to sell at public sale, to the highest bidder on THURSDAY, the 7th day of November, 1867, about three hundred acres of land and Forest Lands, on my Homestead Tract, situated three miles east of Memphis, at the junction of the Raleigh road, and the Memphis and Charleston Railroad State Line road. The most popular street pavements being now in process of construction in Memphis, good turnpike or street railways on the roads leading from the city directly through this property, and the rapid and constant increase of value in the city environs; while the high character of the neighborhood, and the proximity of the Fairgrounds, Race Course and Parade Ground, will render it specially desirable to persons wishing to secure a home in the country, combining the advantages of city residence, and the rapid enhancement of value.

In stating the advantages of this property, I would specially refer to the HEALTH of the locality as having been always considered unusual, if not superior to that of any portion of the city environs; while the high character of the neighborhood, through its present improvements, and the many more in contemplation, promise to give to this property the most desirable surroundings. Persons wishing to secure a home in the country, combining the advantages of city residence, should not fail to attend this sale.

The TITLE to this property has been vested in my father and myself for fifty years, without interruption, and is free from any incumbrance.

CIRCUIT COURT OF SHELBY COUNTY.—The case of Smith vs. Crenshaw et al. occupied the attention of the court on yesterday, and will last many days. From the number of witnesses and counsel, and the numerous objections offered by counsel to the evidence introduced, no opinion can be given as to the termination of the trial.

THE "PRE-ADAMITE" LECTURE.—To-night, you will remember, Doctor Guilford Jones is going to tell us at the "Tabernacle," at 7½ o'clock, all about what happened before God said "let there be light," and as but a little exitement has been occasioned among the "brethren" by this announcement it is a fair hope may fairly be counted upon. Several critics will probably give the Doctor the advantage of their presence, among others, one or two who regard the learned gentleman as treading on tickish ground. At all events the lecture will no doubt be able and interesting, and as the public are cordially invited to hear the discussion in vindication of the Doctor's peculiar views, we may hope to see a crowded house.

CO-OPERATION.—We are gratified to learn that several of our working men contemplate the formation of a co-operative association, similar to those which have been established in several Eastern cities, for the purpose of enabling them to reduce their present expenditure for living. Wages are high in Memphis, but the cost of living here is comparatively much greater than in other cities. It is doubtful whether a sufficient number of persons can be induced to join to give the enterprise a fair trial. The success of these associations has for its object the enabling its members to purchase groceries, provisions, coal and wood of the best quality, at the lowest cash market prices, and from the profits of the business to declare dividends to be distributed among the members in proportion to each one's trade with the store, the shareholders drawing eight per cent. interest per annum. In Philadelphia the object of one association is to provide cheap food—pudding, rice cheap homesteads in Parisian working people.

INDUSTRIAL AID SOCIETY.—The officers and directors of the Industrial Aid Society are now ready to receive any kind of work done by the society, such as all kinds of children and ladies' clothing; gent emen's clothing and goods that merchants may desire made up. There are many worthy applicants for work. Many of them are in much need, and the ladies who have undertaken this noble work of aiding the poor by not suffering poor should be neglected. Those who desire to know more of the society and is qualified to call on the Matron at their rooms in the Stillman block, or o any of the officers.

Money Plenty and Confidence Restored.

In the past three months there has been remitted to the Northwest through Memphis as state by bankers and merchants, not less than fifteen millions in payment for beeon and bread stuffs. Hence the unprecedented scarcity of money which has made it extremely difficult for the people to buy bread. They were unable of course to buy chances for city property or country farms and for this reason, through the past two months, the business of the Sembrech Asylum has been almost suspended. The abundance of food, produced everywhere in the South, will prevent like poverty in future, and the people, rich and poor, may look confidently to a brighter financial future whatever the political fortunes of the country. Recent Northern elections also show that the tide of Radicalism is turned back wards and that it will be supplanted either by Republicanism or Democracy. Go therefore and take stock in the Southern Asylum. Own a railroad farm for one dollar, or magnificent city property for five dollars. Both drawings occur on the third Monday in October. Tickets may be procured through the Memphis agency.

UNITED STATES COURT.—The case of Alexander vs. Fitzpatrick was again taken up on yesterday, but was continued over for several days on account of the sickness of a juror. Judge Swayne heard the argument of Colonel McRae, in chambers, on the petition of Thompson Deane and the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of Memphis and the Memphis Gayoso Gas Company, for injunction. The bill was filed to obtain an injunction restraining the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of Memphis from subscribing stock in the Gayoso Gas Company, and from aiding by license or privilege that company in the purpose of their enterprise by the use of the streets, and to further restrain the said gas company from prosecuting their enterprise of establishing a competing gas company. Colonel McRae represents the complainant and Messrs. Kortright & Craft, R. J. Morgan, T. W. Brown the defendants. The argument will continue through several days. The court meets this morning at the usual hour.

THE NEW MEMPHIS THEATER.

The Opening Night.

"The Hunchback," by James Sheridan Knowles, was produced at the New Memphis theater last night. The principal character of the play is doubtful to us, whether Julia or the Hunchback, but of the lady we will speak first. Julia then is a young girl who has been reared and educated by her father in a state of rack—but unknown to her as her father—in the seclusion of a country life, in the hope that she may be kept from the toilet of an infected world," that did grow up innocent, pure and lovely. At the time he desired proper, her guardian, the Hunchback—Sir Walter—introduces to his Eve in her Eden Sir Richard Clifford, a young baronet who had added him in a quarrel with some young scions of the nobility, who were drinking in the company of the gay Lord Rochdale. Sir Richard falls deeply in love and declares his passion more energetically at their first meeting to the fair Julia, who was but a few moments previous in the conversation with her friend Helen, a town lady renouncing all desire for town life and pleasures, and avowing eternal allegiance to the charms of her country home. To "try" her lover she puts this at him, but he is so enamored of her that he readily falls in with her wishes and thinks, might have become a very fashionable country couple, and so this drama ended, but for a sudden call received by her guardian at once her immediately to London. There the scene changes. The sweet simplicity comes to an end, and the fair Julia, out Herrodine Herrod, becomes the gayest of the gay, the proud, admired lady of the manor, and the idol of lovers. She does not forget Sir Richard, but meets him while in the zenith of her fashionable career, and when speaking to her friend Helen of how she would act, when approached in a fit of folly, she so wounds his love and pride that he comes forward to her, in effect, and tells her though he will keep his word and lead her to the altar, he will there leave her. Resenting this treatment of his ward, the Hunchback sends Clifford to avenge a supposed insult in a ruined man. The real life to the property enjoyed by Sir Richard, and who had been supposed dead, having come to claim it, and thus at the 5th act he strikes down Sir Richard captured of fancied ill-fated lady and the Hunchback, taking advantage of Helen's indignant feelings, receives the proposals made to her by Lord Rochdale, and she accepts, then, hearing of Clifford's loss she her heart relents and she finds too late that she loves him she never sees him more." But, "it's well that ends well." The young heartsick lady going to the bridegroom's altar, and the latter's friend against her inclination, sees again the man she loves, who as the secretary of the bridegroom brings a letter to the bride. She is overcome and declares her love for him, and her abhorrence to the proposed union; he rushes to rescue her, and when at the final moment he steps forward and claims her, and the Hunchback proclaims himself her unknown father. Her troubles are over and the scene is effective. The conception of Julia's character is very fine. Her struggles between duty, as proposed upon her by the Hunchback on whom, not knowing him to be her father, she was tenderly attached and her love are most skilfully portrayed.

Plays better suited than the Hunchback for the opening night of a season, might have been selected, because, though exceedingly effective in its display of standing ovations, it is not calculated to bring upon the stage the full strength of a stock company. Two male and two female characters are all that really have a part to play, and therefore it is difficult what unjust to regard the performances last evening as any test of the strength of the company as a whole. The character will, and perhaps it would be equally unjust to judge the actors who appeared last evening by this single appearance.

Upon entering last night, the first feature that struck our attention was the elegance of the audience. The house was well filled with an appreciative and a very fashionable audience. Several ladies wore dresses and diamonds that must have cost many hundred dollars, and we observed one gentleman's boot coat alone cost a hundred and fifty dollars.

Among the audience, we observed many of playgoers—men who are nothing if not critical—newspaper writers, ardent amateurs of the Memphis Club, young gentlemen who declaim at the Fanny Thurston entertainments, and professional men of many sorts and sizes. The audience, like most Memphis audiences, seemed to judge the actors by the play. If an actor uttered noble sentiments in his part, they applauded, without reference to his manner, his facial expression, his gestures or any other faults of his performance. They seemed anxious to evince their sympathy for proper sentiments, rather than their appreciation of artistic skill. Every woman frowned when John uttered rebukingly to Master Walter, or every man nodded when Master Walter or Sir Thomas spoke or acted in a manly manner. It is doubtful whether one should most admire this amiable prepossession in favor of virtue, or that criticism which finds its subject matter in the accessories of dramatic representation. We stood last evening beside a very clever young gentleman, who was manifestly annoyed by the fact that Sir Thomas wore a red sash, when a blue one would have been more accordant with the rest of his costume. Miss Belle Boyd did not arrive last evening, and has been place to have had to be supplied by Mrs. D. R. Allen, who certainly deserved much applause for the manner in which she performed the part. Miss Fanny Edrien as Helen was worthy of much commendation. The dresses of ladies were rich, but certainly a little modern in the style. Mr Frank Roche as Sir Richard Clifford was fully and appropriately dressed, but his ideal of the character made Sir Walter too youthful for Julia's father, and too well shaped to merit special designation as the Hunchback. He seemed, too, as too youthful, too vigorous, but his enunciation was good, and his performance was certainly very creditable. Mr. W. S. Ferguson was well dressed with, perhaps, the exception of that scarf, and his performance as Sir Thomas was good. His voice is not strong nor flexible, and in those passages which seemed to require passion he seemed to take things a little coolly, but he is a very good actor. Mr. Ellerton as Fabian had little to do, but he did it well.

This evening the Lady of Lyons, that romantic, improbable, but to young folks very interesting play, is to be produced with Miss Belle Boyd as Pauline.

Little Betty Bayon between Adams and Washington streets, was yesterday dammed up by the Fire Department, under direction of Fire Warden Kehoe, and will now supply as much water as one of the largest cisterns. On a special occasion the engines can be supplied for two hours from it.

A very important suit, in which the old Gas Company is involved, is shortly to come before the United States Court. One point involved is the validity of the acts of the civil commission appointed here in war times by the military authority. It seems that under authority of the civil commission a mortgage on some seventy-five thousand dollars worth of stock in the Gas Company was executed to Mr. Thomas A. Nelson and wife now ask to have this foreclosure set aside and permission given for them to buy in the mortgage to Mr. Dean. Judge Holmes, a distinguished lawyer and member of Congress from Indiana, is here on behalf of the plaintiffs, Mr. Nelson and wife. Messrs. Bullock and Van Anderson will be associate counsel with them.

There are doctors who are always seeking to get a reputation for medical ability by expressing in ad oracular manner the opinion that cases to which they are called are cholera or some other very bad disease, one of them declared a short time ago that a case which was pulling for dear life would die before night. Another doctor declared, in the last declaring that the disease was not yellow fever at all, he set to work and cured the man. A sensible doctor will not by declaring that each case of indigestion is the result of cholera or some other dangerous disease, cause alarm in the public mind, and sensible people who hear a doctor expressing such opinions will rather consider him a poor doctor for dangerous diseases that he himself is unable to cure.

The friends of Channing Richards, Esq., hope that the general dissatisfaction of the legal profession at the nomination of Judge Thorne, for Register of Bankruptcies, will induce Judge Trigg to remonstrate against it, and refuse confirmation. They hope, in that case, that Mr. Richards may yet get the place. The friends of Mr. Thorne falsely claim that Mr. Richards will not swear what amount of money or valuables have gone into his hands as Police Commissioner, it would be absurd to make Register of Bankruptcies. They also allege that Mr. Richards is pressed on behalf of Messrs. Tomeny, Bingham and their newspaper interests, and that the issue at stake really is: shall the little Radical or some other paper do the bankruptcy printing, and two for the local at that? If Mr. Richards' friends was correctly reported yesterday that Admiral Semmes was about to withdraw from the Bulletin, but one member of the Bulletin company denies the statement as wholly untrue. The probability is that there is some foundation for the rumor.

GOOD COTTON FACTORS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.—The cotton trade of Memphis this fall to be larger this year than it has ever been before. The cotton from Arkansas and Mississippi will easily seek this market rather than go to New Orleans, and the cotton of West Tennessee will come here rather than go to Louisville or St. Louis. All our cotton factors and commission merchants will doubtless do well. None of them deserve more to get a liberal share of trade than Sample, Mitchell & McGeehee, No. 20 Union street, who are reliable gentlemen, are familiar with business, and devote themselves to the interests of their patrons.

More on the Gas Question.

EDITORS AVALANCHE: It was not my intention when I last addressed you to again arrest in this subject. Having adopted the suggestion of Mr. Williamson in his card that "there were no features or remarks calling for a rejoinder," and that he was willing to leave it to the courts, the people and time to decide. This I accepted and pronounced the newspaper controversy was at an end, but unconscious to myself when I saw in your issue of the 21st instant, a lengthy communication under the caption of "Train Oil" on the gas question.

I should not have noticed it were it not for the fact that on perusal it is smacked of being the production of some person the anti-gas enemy home than the author's "Train Oil." I am well satisfied the article was written or caused to be written by an officer and stockholder of the old company. I deem the articles too lengthy to allow its insertion therefore and therefore in full, feeling assured you understand the efforts making by the old company to "pull the wool over your eyes." I will therefore only refer to such portions of it as merit a reply.

First, "Train Oil" says gas by saying he was opposed to gas companies. Why, then, did he oppose the present one? Again, he says gas companies are unpopular. You and I are not unpopular that they should be, if managed and can relied as our present monopoly has been. Again, he says we are "granting away monopolies." I think we have just cause. How are we to stop it but by opposition works? We have long waited for a correction. Has it come? Would it ever come if we had not applied the rod to the unruly child? We have got hold by the throat now, and we intend to hold him until he makes amends for his past sins. Again, referring to the Board of Mayor and Aldermen, I must confess "Train Oil," as a Cranage, appears to be well posted in our local affairs. His figures are correct, but he is not upon the brain, and then goes on and lectures them on their duties; and as the Mayor comes in for a share. He says "the Mayor should in a message vetoing the proposition, and says (he may be) a consolation with the loss of one hundred and fifty dollars; for the purpose of retrenchment suggests the discharge of the city's nurse and the appropriation of a quarter of a million dollars to the Gayoso Gas Company, is to the very object in which he had said the city's finances were too low for her to expend one thousand dollars." Again, could these men be so inconsistent upon any other subject than of gas? Assuredly the above is the language used towards you by "Train Oil," or gas oil. It is in keeping with the arrogant and dictatorial letter addressed a short time ago by the officers of the old company, insulting the voters of the city. I have no doubt you and they will duly appreciate the high opinion entertained of you, and the people's intelligence to vote on the question, by "Train Oil" and others.

I am not aware that the Mayor stated he was opposed to giving the Gayoso Gas Company ten thousand dollars; on the contrary, he voted the one hundred thousand dollars proposition on the ground that it was not sufficient, and advised in his message two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; the Mayor, I have no doubt, in this view of the case, was acting according to his honest convictions, and for the best interests of the city.

Now a few facts as to the pecuniary advantage to the city in the subscription. It will save her at present ten thousand dollars a year on her own consumption; before five years, with the prospective growth of our city, it will reach twenty-five thousand dollars—the would pay ten per cent. on two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. What it would cost the gas consumers—say at present the yearly consumption of gas is sixty three million eight hundred and seventy-five thousand cubic feet at the present rates would amount to three hundred and eighty-three thousand two hundred and fifty dollars. At the proposed rates it would save the consumer one hundred and ninety-one thousand six hundred and twenty-five dollars per annum. The cost of this money goes abroad. The above figures are based on gas at three dollars per thousand feet, and will come more home and effect your pockets more than all the theories and reasonings "Train Oil" could write in a year.

I gather talks about the price of their gas being low, and I assert, without fear of contradiction, that Memphis pays the highest price for gas of any city in the United States, allowing her facilities for getting coal.

Again "Train Oil" speaks of the profits of the old company. I never could learn what their actual profits were, as I have never read or seen their balance sheets or a public declaration of dividends. I presume most of my fellow citizens are as much in the dark as myself.

Again, he says city bonds are worth fifty cents on the dollar. The city must feel complimented by the estimate of "Train Oil" as to the value of her bonds. I hold that her bonds, in a short time, will be worth seventy-five cents on the dollar.

He further says the Mayor raises a question about your character. This is evidently an insidious attempt to affect the stockholders in the new company. As to the charter of the Gayoso Gas Company, it is as good as that of the old company. The Chancellor of this District has refused to grant you an injunction: the City Attorney has passed upon it, stating you had no exclusive privileges, and that the city has a legal and just right to take stock in the new company.

"Train Oil" further argues that the old company's works were built cheaper than those of the new company can be, on the ground of the difference in material and labor. I would admit this to be so were it not for the following reasons: The old works were not constructed properly; some of the pots or pipes were of sufficient capacity; as the city kept growing such as to have to be taken up and new ones laid down, and new pipes had to be laid, old works torn down and new ones erected, hence an immense capital has been invested and wasted.

It will appear strange, but I make this assertion, that the works of the Gayoso Gas Company will be constructed for one-half what the old works have cost, and I have no doubt equal, if not superior work. Why, gas works, like other scientific works, have improved in this age of progress, and our company are taking all necessary precautions so as not to disturb their works for many years to come.

As to the closing reason of "Train Oil." I do not deem any notice of them necessary.

The question is put, "Do you know of any opposition works that have succeeded?" I answer yes, Chicago and many others; and there would be more successful opposition works built if not for exclusive charters—which the old company has not got. Many of our citizens must be aware of the efforts made in Cincinnati, Ohio, and St. Louis, Missouri, by the city authorities to buy the old companies, but they will not sell.

I will not trespass further on your columns, hoping I may not again be called to reply to such emanations as that of "Train-Oil," or any other oil containing so many illogical deductions, false reasonings, and no true facts.

I am, Messrs. Editors,

Respectfully, JOHN DONOVAN,
President Memphis Gayoso Gas Company.

A WAY TO FAVOR TRADE.—Nearly all planters along the line of the Memphis and Ohio railroad were last year in the habit of selling their cotton to Memphis buyers instead of shipping their cotton to Louisville, Cincinnati or St. Louis, rather than selling it in Memphis. But nearly all of them have found that they would have done better to the amount of seventy-five or fifty dollars a bale by selling it in our city, and as a general rule they propose to send to Memphis this year's crop, and in this connection trade might be greatly favored by the action of our City Fathers. The Memphis and Ohio road has the right guaranteed to it to lay a track, and bring ten and a half miles of the Memphis and Ohio road, from the Northeast to Vicksburg, Natchez, New Orleans and other Southern places. It would make Memphis the head of navigation, and build up lines of steamers between this city and New Orleans. Nothing can more certainly conduce to the future greatness of Memphis. This, with the building of links of railroad from Cave City to Danville, Kentucky, and from Maysville to Jamestown, Ohio, will give us the best possible route Memphis to the Atlantic seaboard at Baltimore, and thus add greatly to the commercial importance of our city.

LADIES' FASHIONS.—Keeping pace with the seasons, the styles of ladies bonnets are passing from the lightness of summer to the brilliant tints of an American autumn, and the hair for the coming winter and willow, the goddess, the combinations of green and brown will soon reign in fashions. The Fanchon and other coquelish hats still reign, but the leaders of fashion have adopted new styles which the crowd will soon assume. Brown hats, often as fitting hats, hats with a broad band in front, trimmed with sprays of rich flowers or bands of satin or velvet plaits, and surmounted by that most fashionable ornament, the diadem, and will crowns broad and flat are now the hight of fashion. The style is not likely to last very long. It too easily becomes flashy. Gold spangled veils and golden ornaments sparingly used on rare occasions may do, but too lavishly used is not calculated to give an air of refinement. Hats of brown or crimson velvet, with a fall of black lace are sometimes very becoming. Red-brown is the favorite color for lady's dress goods, with shirt short for the street, and as long as they can be made for other dresses no Brown corded velvet is the mode for the fall, which is likely to come into much favor this winter. Cloaks are to be worn longer, and embroidery is all the rage.

RIVER NEWS.

AVALANCHE OFFICE,
TUESDAY, September 24.

BUSINESS—WEATHER—RIVERS.

Sunday and yesterday were dry but pleasant days. They presht no sign of the near approach of equinoctial storms. The river here falls steadily. At Pittsburg her flats are high and a half feet reported, with a shifting, crooked and narrow channel. We know of no boat aground at that point at this writing. The officers of the Commercial report but three and a half feet to Duvall's Bluff. We have no later report from the Arkansas than that brought out by the Gleaner. The rise in that stream reported by St. Louis papers might fast the Captain of the Enterprise, who "will go to de Fort Schmit, by de-in, mit-gal Stoppin' ons vhen," but it is not fulfilled upon him. The Ohio has suspended. It is like an Idaho's dreadful—dried up.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Cincinnati Commercial has a very reliable telegraphic correspondent at this port—at his disposal of the 24th, he says: "Grand Jewel—Train Oil, Lady Gay and City of Alton. The Virginia has not passed down yet, while the Lady Gay passed up a week ago, and the Alton never passes down.

The Minnesota at last accounts was fast up awaiting a rise at Prairie Island bar. This is bad news for some of our merchants.

The steamers Dean Richmond and Commodore Vanderbilt ran into each other near Hardscrat, on the North river, on the night of the 19th instant. Both vessels were injured, and the Richmond sunk in less than an hour.

The H. S. Turner, sunk in the upper Missouri, was raised by the Underwriter, but it is reported that she sunk a second time.

A thief named Theophilus George, carried on several passengers on the Rob Roy on her last trip from Keokuk to St Louis. He got little in all, and left the boat at Alton.

Captain Swain has bought the Mary Swan for the Red river trade. Terms private. She goes there the barque and lagoons of Louisiana to loathe alligators, crocodiles and pelicans. We hope she may be more successful in making a fortune for her present owner than she was with her last one. She is a good boat and we wish her well.

The Gleaner, Captain John Fenwick, will leave to-day for Arkansas river. She goes up as far as Pine Bluff. Mr. Patterson is clerk.

The Natoma goes out to-day for Mariana. Fred. Bingham is clerk.

The Sun Gay, Captain Hunt, will leave for Vicksburg and the lands to-day and the Lady Gay to-morrow.

Captain D. N. Greenleaf, of the Memphis and Vicksburg Transportation Company, is in the city on business.

The Colonel has very fine lot of cotton on board. The first of Cook and Thompson have established a reputation which would not do disredit to Robeus, Murillo & Co.

The fine packet Commercial, Captain Ashford, is the White river packet to-day. She connects with the cars at Duvall's Bluff for Little Rock, and at Augusta with the Fairy Queen for Jacksonport, and all points above. Messrs. Morton, Smithers and Robertson are clerks.

The swift packet St. Patrick, Captain Garrett Hula, leaves to-day for Vicksburg and the lands. She carries the United States mail and makes all way landings. Mr. Clay Rice is clerk. The Irishman works on the best steamers afloat, and her officers are No. 1 gentlemen.

The steamer Chipola exploded her boiler eighteen miles below Columbus, Georgia, on the 19th. Six persons, two white and four colored, all employes on the boat, were killed. The passengers are all safe. The boat is a total loss.

The Bertha is laid up at Evansville.

A proposition is being considered by the city council of Evansville for the removal of the bar in front of the city by means of a wing dam nearly opposite the wreck of the old steamer Missouri.

A fireman named John Tollis fell overboard from the City of Alton on her last up trip and was drowned.

The work of removing the rock from the Rock Island Rapids, in the Mississippi river, has commenced. The powerful machinery of Ellington's steamer Gleaner is now pounding four feet into the solid rock. The chisel weighs over eight thousand pounds, and drops thirty feet.

A lady of Savannah, Georgia, while out yachting in Ossiting bay, a few days since, from her person a diamond pin worth $50. It went to the bottom of the sea and it is now no doubt decorating the person of some interesting mermaid.

A "professor" who dives from a hight of two hundred feet into water only ten feet deep is the sensation in Lonon. How he gets over the laws of inertia and gravitation, is a matter of interest.

A fight occurred on the R. C. Gray while she lay aground in the Ohio. One of the pilots fired a pistol which killed a deckhand. The shooting created disturbance by the persuasive arguments of a captain bar.

Our young friend Mr. Paul Wright, clerk of James T. Bourne & Co., returned home from Clarksville on Saturday. Many compliments were showered upon the clerk of the "Ed. Yost," whose "shoot" was fishing upon the arm of the "returned Yankee." Memphis belle will be disappointed; but, happy Paul! "what are others' troubles now to him?"

It will be remembered that a lot of ghoulitrix, with stolen money and unsound Asian brains, left on a European tour in the steamship Quaker City. They were horribly indignant at being quarantined at Palermo or some other place. The last piece of impudence we learn from them is an invitation upon the Czar of Russia at Jassa, his summer residence. The Czar was chancilly of to receive them, but, with characteristic Yankee impudence, they persisted, and had to have a speech, in which Mark Twain, who at one time was a pilot on the river, and travelled with gentlemen, figured extensively. The Quaker City laid three days awaiting a return visit, but they were very properly snubbed, and had to leave without the honor. Poor shoddy!

The mate of the St. Patrick, Henry Bowen, has been a prisoner since the 18th. He is unquestionably a fighting man, but like Aaron Jones, he comes out second best. We recorded a fight between him and Tim. Bowlan, in which, like Hyenas, he overmastered himself. On the last trip down of the St. Patrick, a negro hit him with a cord wood stick, which illustrated the condition of Jones after each round with McCoole, in the late big fight; the St. Patrick will soon arrive. The darkey took the back at Chicago. Though these little affairs were unfortunate in their results, we still have an interest in the News Agency so let that our very clever friend Powers can clean out the Norman, or its owner of the stock.

A band of Cherokee Indians pursued some horse thieves the other day, and caught them above Fort Smith. Eighteen of the thieves were killed. A few Cherokee warriors are wanted at Memphis.

The tow-boat, Kellogg, arrived yesterday from above. She was lying at the coal pile when we left the landing last night.

The Virginia is reported above St. Genevieve at least twelve inches more than is in the channel.

The Mepham crossed Phillips' bar ahead of the Shreve, but had not arrived at dark last night.

In our new building, No. 22 Jefferson street, near the corner of Main.

That New Orleans is oftentimes the scene of varied amusements, those who have sojourned there for any length of time have been very apt to find out. It is, or was, a fast city. We knew it when Kendall and Lumsden and Holbrook were there—when Bullitt and Bullen were in the Box, and Worthington Snethen was ruining John Gibson. We knew it when Denis Corcoran was the prince of Irish wits, and George Bradbury divided his time between "pool" and "sherry cobbler." But all that is long in the past, and nearly all the glorious souls named have passed away too. It is a sad picture to contemplate, and we turn from it to the latest fashion of the new city, as depicted by the Radical paper, the Republican, which seems to have painted on specs:

A FIGHT IN THE WORKHOUSE.—One of our reporters visited the workhouse this morning just in time to witness a desperate fight between two of the prisoners in one of the large cells, where as many as forty were enjoying their "otium cum dignitate."

The man who got the worst of it was a new comer, and the alleged cause of the fight against him was that he had appropriated more than his share of the bread ration.

One of the older occupants of the cell, a young, vigorous, powerful, athletic fellow, got his adversary in chancery, and was punishing him according to the most scientific rules of the prize ring, the other prisoners urging him to "give him—" to "break his—neck," "kill the thief," when suddenly, as our reporter was witnessing the fight through a window from the yard, inside spectators cried out, "Hold on!" "That's enough!" and an officer appeared at the door of the cell. Hostilities were immediately suspended, quiet was resumed, and the "cruel war over."

The victor was then marched out of the cell, across the yard, into the "pickery," where the "stocks" are prepared for refractory prisoners.

A colored employe raised the upper part of the machine, leaving a half circle for the limbs of the culprit, the prisoner was ordered to stand on his hands, first one leg was put into the groove, then the other, the machine was let into its place, and the prize fighter was fixed in the stocks, where he had an opportunity to ruminate on the uncertainties of victory. Street Commissioner Baker also witnessed the fight in the cell, and therefore who appeared at the door was a great part of it from the yard. It was conducted according to the highest rules of the ring. It would be well if other victors in prize fights tried the "stocks" after the fight. The example at the workhouse is worthy of commendation.

Elias Howe, Jr., was pronounced a hopeless case by the best European doctors, and he came home expecting soon to die. Arrived at Bridgeport, his limbs became dropsical, and his body swelled and put on the black hue. Physicians pronounced him dying. Finally, as a last resource, a lady, a former resident of Hartford, was mentioned, who had been for ninety years a practicing surgeon. She was telegraphed for, came, and after some misgivings was permitted to undertake the case. It proved successful to a remarkable degree. The dropsical belly of the limbs yielded, and the black hue of the feet was followed by scrysipelatous eruptions, and a general mitigation of the symptoms. Finally, Mr. Howe has become strong enough for journeys to his former home.

Describing gambling "hells" of Saratoga, a correspondent of the World says: The checks click, and the cards come out, and the wheel of fortune spins. The gamblers who gamble by cash prick down the run of their cards on their pasteboard tablets. The youth who "go in for a flyer" are debating each with himself whether or not he can afford another loss, and calling finally for another pile of ivories, trusting that the luck should turn. But his checks follow their predecessors into the dealer's growing heap and the unlucky one brandies himself and departs, to meditate how he shall pay his bills, and get back to begin work again. The stars pale, and the looming outlines of the great hotel stand stark against the white east before the last of the gamesters takes himself away to where a widow and with awaits him, to toss till the gong sounds, and curse his luck, and mutter, "What a damned fool I was to come to Saratoga." And this is the Saratoga season.

A book of travels in Spain describes a new feature of buli-fighting. Nine negroes dressed grotesquely, stand in a row, the best being admitted, goes butting among them right and left, and speedily knocks down all who have not the good fortune to anticipate his action by "dropping." Then the darkies all get up again. Chairs were brought, and the Samboes were "set up in a row." Again the bull entered; again he butted right and left; and again four Samboes were upset. Finally a united pile of chairs and darkeys. The narrator of these achievements says this was the great fun, and was repeated several times. The bull liked, the "nine pins" seemed to like it, and the people gloried in it.

McCauley, the Kings county burglar, had his house furnished from garret to cellar in the most sumptuous manner with the proceeds of his robberies. The paintings upon the walls, the Brussels carpets upon the floors, the wine in the cellar, the books upon the elegant tables, all formerly graced other mansions, and much has been identified. It puzzles the officers to understand how he accomplished such lucky robberies. He is a young man, and neither his wife nor his neighbors were aware of his business.

Julius Movin, of Buffalo, well known in railroad circles, lately went across for health and recreation, and wholly unasked received the appointment of consul at Coblentz. But arriving in Germany, he was notified that the Prussian minister of war opposed the passing of exequators to foreign governments by any of their fortified cities. Mr. Movins at once inclosed a copy of this letter to Mr. Seward, with his resignation.

The Prairie (Indiana) Telegraph says the bit excitement in that place has furnished a flowing well of white sulphur chalybeate water unsurpassed anywhere. It cost the company four or five thousand dollars, is between eight and nine hundred feet deep, flows at the rate of eight hundred barrels a day, rises eight or ten feet above the surface, is wholesome and, to many, very palatable.

A man in Hamilton, Ohio, has drank an average of twenty-five kegs of lager per day for fifteen years past, and is still drinking. He is a hefty person, frequently awakes with a bad taste in his mouth, and has been known not to feel well himself.
